To Our Valued Travelers:

I hope you are faring well in this time of uncertainty, and taking heed the directives of the world and national health and government leaders. Here at Boscov's Travel, we are doing the same. As of Friday, March 20th all leisure travel offices and our corporate offices made the switch to remote work environments. Our management and tech teams worked tirelessly to ensure our travel specialists didn't miss a beat, all while safe-guarding your privacy and securing all your data. That said, we are still here and still working to ensure you are fully informed and updated on any events that may affect your planned travel, as well as ready to help you plan any future travel. The world may have paused, but it does not stop. We will all come out of this challenging time having learned just how strong we can be and how resilient this world is.

Like you, our teams are staying as informed as possible with global, national and local news. In addition to that, we are also staying up-to-date with our travel partners and the American Society of Travel Advisors, a global advocate for the travel industry and the traveling public. We will take all resources into consideration when working on your current and future travel plans.

We sincerely appreciate your business and ongoing confidence in Boscov's Travel. We take your trust in us seriously, and will always place you first, advocating for your best interests.

Thank you again for your loyalty and confidence. We are very grateful for your business.

All the Best,

Pat K. Cinfici
